

Kerry Lee Morgan is an Attorney, licensed to practice in Michigan, Virginia and the District Of Columbia as well as numerous federal courts including the United States Supreme Court. His chief areas of practice involve municipal law, employment discrimination, litigation, environmental law and educational policy.

He has also served as an Attorney with the United States Commission on Civil Rights in Washington D.C.

In addition to practicing law, since 1980, Mr. Morgan received his Masters of Arts, magna cum laude, in Public Policy from Regent University. He has also written a number of thought-provoking articles in the areas of natural law and unalienable rights. He recently completed an extensive series of Articles concerning limitations on federal power based on the principles of the Declaration of Independence, titled "What Can We do Now Our Freedom is Taken?"

See <http://lonang.com/commentaries/foundation/our-freedom-is-taken/> He also completed a legal review of religious liberty principles and Supreme Court cases titled, "Unalienable Rights, Equality and The Free Exercise of Religion." In 1997, University Press of America published his book, "Real Choice, Real Freedom in American Education," a scholarly work that articulates the legal and Constitutional case for parental rights and against governmental control of American Education.